

SAFEBOUND LUXURY · WEBSITE OVERVIEW

What we're building and why it matters.

June 2026 · For internal review

The Big Picture

We're building a dedicated website for the Safebound Luxury division — separate from the main Safebound Moving & Storage site — that positions us as the logistics authority for South Florida's luxury market.

The core shift in positioning: we are not a moving company with a luxury tier. We are a dedicated luxury logistics operation — receiving, storage, FF&E coordination, white-glove delivery, and installation — for the clients and projects that demand a different standard entirely.

The AEO Strategy

AEO stands for Answer Engine Optimization. Beyond standard SEO, it means structuring the site so that AI tools — Google's AI Overviews, ChatGPT, Perplexity — pull from our content when someone asks a question about luxury logistics.

The way we do that is by making the site an encyclopedia for our vertical. Every page answers a specific question that a designer, estate manager, or hospitality professional is actually asking:

- What is a receiving warehouse and why do interior designers use one?
- How does FF&E logistics work for a luxury hotel opening?
- What's the difference between white-glove delivery and standard delivery?
- How do I find a logistics partner for a Palm Beach estate project?

Each service page, each clientele page, and each blog article is written to own one of these answers. Over time, we become the reference — not just a vendor.

Site Structure

The site has four main sections, each backed by a Webflow CMS Collection so content can be added and updated without touching code:

- Services — Individual pages for each service (Receiving Warehouses, Installation Services, FF&E Logistics, Designer Services, etc.). 3 of 8 built so far.
- Clientele — Pages written from the client's perspective — Interior Designers, Luxury Brands, Estate Managers, Builders, Art Collectors, Yacht Owners. 1 of 6 built.
- Resources — The encyclopedia. Blog-style articles that target specific search and AI queries. Structure defined, content not yet written.
- The Work — A curated gallery of specialized projects we've handled — each with a photo, title, and brief description. More on this below.

The Work Gallery

"The Work" is a gallery of real projects — the kind that don't fit a standard service description. A 1,000-pound marble table. A grand piano lifted to a 34th-floor penthouse. A gallery collection of 17th-century antique maps. A 34-room boutique hotel FF&E rollout.

Each entry has a photo, a title, a category (Fine Art / Furniture / Custom Crating / Installation / Yacht / Estate / Hospitality), and a 2-sentence description. Visitors can filter by category.

The purpose is twofold: it proves capability to prospective clients, and it gives the AEO content strategy real, specific examples to reference. Currently built with 9 placeholder entries — needs real projects and real photos.

The prototype is running locally and ready to walk through together.
